PROPRIETORS. SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 12.

THE New York Post has intimated that the scheme for putting a war plank in the Repulican platform for Gazette, pretty good Protection authority, scouts the suggestion, and declares its opinion that on the contrary, it is a scheme of the Free Traders (of whom the Post is the leading organ) to embarrass the Protectionists in Pennsylvania. The Gazette has yet to see the first Pennsylvania journal among those known as consistent and sincere advonous properties. The Republican party is morally bound to maintain the Amendment until it shall have become a part of the supreme law of the land. It is as logical result of a war waged in the interests of slavery against the Union. The complement of citizenship is the ballot. There can be no permanent half-way house between known as consistent and sincere advocates of Protection, which gives a shadow of countenance to the alleged movement to Republicanize the Alabama that Republican politicians incline to out their host in counting upon the Republicans of Pennsylvania.

Whatever may be the ulterior objects of those who have inspired the alleged movement, the indications are that it will fall still born. It has been condemued sharply by the press already. to do with it or knowing anything

Politicians who want to raise a breeze that shall fill their sails, will have to try some other method. There is such a thorough and wide-spread realization of the fact that what the country needs now is repose, that anything calculated cause about the Africanization of the to disturb it finds little favor. Those who want to swim with the popular current should direct their energies to promote peace rather than war. So far as England is concerned, people understand that we have her, as the matter stands, at a greater disadvantage than we would have by fighting her. If we fought England, we should doubtless take Canada; and if It would introduce a large incongruous population whose interests would have to be harmonized in Congress with others already widely diverse. Every such addition to our already immense area, only increases the difficulty of governing it. It is not the big farm that makes the prosperous farmer. It is the well cultivated and well managed farm. It is not mere extent of territory that makes a country great and prosperous or its people happy. It is homogeneity of people and unity of interest. There is a limit to the area which one government can safely embrace and to the number of antagonistic interests which it can successfully harmonize. The true policy, if this government is to be perpetuated and if it is to best secure the benignant ends of its creations of the Harmonize of the Harmonize of the perpetuated and if it is to best secure the benignant ends of its creation of the Harmonize of the Harmonize of the Harmonize of the Harmonize of the picture of misery. her strength; and since Mr. Summer's speech she has realized the enormous advantage her own conduct during the rebellion gives this country. It is this realization that explains the rage of the English papers over that speech. So long as the present status is maintained, she dare not engage in a war with anybody; for then her commerce would be at the mercy of American privateers. A war with the United States would miss.

OHIO AND THE FIFTEENTH An Admirable Plea for Batification

From the Cincinnati Commercial, The Republican party is squarely committed to the Fifteenth Amendment. It was originated and adopted by a Republican Congress; it has re-ceived the unqualified sanction of a Republican President; it has been rati-fied by more than a score of Republican Legislatures. From beginning to end it is a Republican measure. There is nothing about it that is Democratic, except the principle of political equal-

use in next Fall's elections, which its Washington correspondent professed to have discovered, was a "plot" of the

And it declares that if it be true that Republican politicians incline to engraft the Alabama question among Either we must go backward to the erparty issues, they will reckon with- slavement of the emancipated, or forward to their political enfranchisement.
As a practical question in Ohio, affecting the numerical strength of parties, the enfranchisement of her colored citizens is of small consequence. In 1860 the entire colored population of the State was but 35,673 against 2,302,808 whites. Of this comparative small number but 18,231 were males, and but remaining adults would not have added five thousand to the voting population of the State. It is doubtful whether it would be increased to that extent were every adult negro made a voter tate is insufferable nonsense. But the question must be considered Their assent is required to the princiole of the Amendment before it can be incorporated into the Constitution of the United States. The Republicans of Ohio cannot escape this issue if they would. It is upon them. They can no more remain neutral in such a contest we did would have won an elephant. We should really gain nothing by it.

But if, as at New York and New Orleans, the bloodthirsty rioter happens to be an Irishman, or a rebel, or a Democrat, or any sort of a white man, then it is not the rioter aforesaid, but the negroes again who gets shot! There is something a little one-sided about this. And then, when the rioter aforesaid is a negro, the Republican fires a thundering editorial at him; when he is a white man, it exculpates, extenuates, or spikes its gun altogether!
